

For More Information

A great deal of red and gray wolf information is available in a variety of mediums. Following are some suggestions to further explore the wolf in your classroom.

Books

Meant to be Wild by Jan DeBlieu, Fulchrum Publishing, for the serious student and adults

Gray Wolf Red Wolf by Dorothy Hinshaw Patent, Clarion Books, for middle school ages

Journey of the Red Wolf by Roland Smith, Cobblehill Books, for middle school ages

Red Wolf Country by Jonathon London, Puffin Books, for the very young reader

The Red Wolf by Alvin Silverstein, Millbrook Press, for middle school ages

Websites

www.fws.gov/r4all/redwolf.html for US Fish and Wildlife Service general information and updates on Red Wolf Recovery www.fws.gov/r9endspp/kid_cor/heyteach.htm for a list of materials, information, games, and activities to help teachers and students learn more about endangered and threatened species www.nczooredwolf.org "The Red Wolves of Alligator River" for web-based classroom instruction, interactive discussion with wildlife biologists, and other interesting aspects of Red Wolf Recovery. Website sponsored by the North Carolina Zoo Society, the North Carolina Zoological Park, and the Red Wolf Coalition www.redwolves.com for information on supporting the red wolf and getting involved with the Red Wolf Coalition www.wolf.org for information and classroom instruction on the status of wolves across the planet and getting involved with the International Wolf Center

www.defenders.org for information and classroom instruction for protection of wild plants and animals (including wolves) in their native habitat and getting involved with Defenders of Wildlife